The current Palestinian Intifada is not simply a localized nationalist response to the repressive Israeli occupation and its war machine. Rather, it is local, regional, and global in its dimensions and implications. It is important to rethink the practices through which we respond to the conflict and the struggles of the Palestinian people as part of our anti-imperialist interventions and in our international/transnational practices of solidarity. Negotiations was a multi-part arts-driven event staged in Toronto in June 2003 by artists, activists and academics who felt the urgency to respond to the escalation of war in Palestine-Israel in solidarity with Palestinian struggles towards a just peace. L'infada palestinienne de notre époque n'est pas seulement une réponse locale et nationaliste à l'occupation répressive par l'état d'Israël sa machine de guerre. Les dimensions et les implications de l'infada sont locales, régionales et globales. Il importe de considérer les pratiques de nos interventions anti-imperialistes et de nos pratiques de solidarité internationale et transnationale par lesquelles nous répondons au conflit et aux luttes du peuple palestinien. En juin 2003, des artistes, des activistes et des universitaires torontois avaient créé Negotiations, un événement multidisciplinaire qui soulignait l'urgence qu'il y a de répondre à l'escalade de la guerre entre la Palestine et l'Israël et de manifester notre solidarité avec la lutte des Palestiniens pour la paix.
